Subject: The CN – 'Community (of) Nations' Preliminary Executive Summary

To All Interested Persons and Organizations,

We seek to establish a large international campus in the City of Los Angeles which will co-locate all of the consulates of the various countries who already have a presence in LA along with their trade and cultural exchange offices. This will become much like a 'west coast version' of the 'United Nations', except that the purpose here will be to de-emphasize the divisive political aspects of international relations such as those we see at the UN today, and we will focus our approach primarily on those qualities that bring world nations and peoples together to share our common humanity, and to make for a very positive and unique environment.

The qualities and common interests that most people around the Earth do share are those such as the desire for World peace, individual human rights and the freedom of self-determination, education, culture and the arts, mutual prosperity, the exchange of trade and business relationships, international development, public benefit and charitable endeavors, programs for the youth, communications, entertainment, and of course, cuisine.

LA's primary transportation hubs such as LAX Airport, which is the 4th busiest in the world for passengers and cargo along with the Port of Los Angeles combined with the Port of Long Beach is considered to be the 9th busiest shipping port complex in the World. And, with Southern California's rich multi-cultural makeup, and LA's trade, business, and entertainment industries, it makes perfect sense to create a more central gathering place where we can bring the international community together to share in the richness of each other's heritage and find our common ground.

This campus will be an international showcase for all the things that the various nations, peoples and cultures may share. Along the lines much like Disney World in Florida's 'Epcot Center World Showcase', the CN will not only be for business, but it will also have a 'theme park-like' feel, and it will feature architectural characteristics that highlight the various countries represented. It will have restaurants, and entertainment and event venues that will establish the CN as a landmark California destination that will attract tourists as well as business and trade relations from all over the world.

The CN is to be anchored by:

American Pacific World University (APWU)

Why it makes perfect sense...

- LA's primary transportation hubs such as LAX Airport, which is the 4th busiest in the world for passengers and cargo
- The Port of Los Angeles combined with the Port of Long Beach is considered to be the 9th busiest shipping port complex in the World
- Southern California's rich multi-cultural makeup
- LA's trade, business, and entertainment industries

An example to loosely follow could be Walt Disney World's Epcot Center World Showcase (Except having a smaller central water feature in which the rest of the system is more distributed throughout the entire complex)

Benefits for California, the City of LA, and the Region...

- Reduce traffic by consolidating disparate facilities
- Central gathering place for international events
- Improve the ability to provide security for consulates
- Makes it much easier to conduct business (personal and commercial) with multiple countries
- Increase in business, trade, travel and tourism, And Jobs!
- Increase in LA and California's tax base and revenues
- Help LA better prepare for the upcoming Olympics, and have something of lasting value long after the games are over
- Really go a long way toward making LA even more of a world-class city!

New York and the East Coast have their own 'United Nations', why shouldn't we here in Los Angeles and the West Coast have our own 'Community (of) Nations'?!...
